Re: Mental Health Tax 2023

Hello

I am deciding whether or not to invest further energy into fighting a Mental Health Tax or simply move to another jurisdiction. My property investment does not seem secure here where the Mayor is determined to discover frivolous ways to take advantage of increasing taxes, especially during this present economic climate.

The Real Estate market will reflect this.

Hard-working throughout my life I have been personally financially responsible for surviving with disabilities which are rejected by the Government and no income supplements towards the permanent losses I suffer subsequently and the negative Mental Health repercussions.

I do not trust that I will benefit in any way from any type of Tax increase/expense.

As a single low-income earner I was optimistic about an improved quality of life when I moved to Guelph from Vaughan in 2018, even though the taxes are higher. However I'm disappointed in the poor tax expenditures: ex. minimal annual/seasonal Road betterment.

I will seek a more promising region to live in. But hopefully maintain my employment in Guelph.

Thank you for your time

Have a great day
